GEN. JOHNSON'S ULTIMATUM SUCCESSFUL

U.S. Relief Workers Back On Project

RADICAL UNIONS ATTEMPTING TO ORGANISE STRIKE

New York, To-day.
With General Hugh Johnson's ultimatum expiring last night, the strike of relief workers appears to have fizzled out. Only 10 per cent. of the workers have not returned to the eastside slum clearance project, on which 170 out of 362 men employed struck work last Saturday.

The American Federation of Labour announces that as far as they are concerned, it is only skilled workers who are walking out. It adds that they are not striking, but are refusing to work for less than standard wages.

The strike has not spread, even though the radical unions not belonging to the Federation of Labour are attempting to organise a strike among the "white collar" workers. — Reuter.

REAL UNITY SOUGHT IN THE COUNTRY

POLITICAL GROUPS CONFER

BETTER UNDERSTANDING REPORTED

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.
Some success was achieved to-day by General Huang Shao-hsiung, the Nanking agent, in restoring a better understanding between the South-west leaders and General Chiang Kai-shek, "strong-man" of the Nanking Government.

Reversing his statement at Hong Kong, that his trip South was without any political significance, General Huang admitted to newspaper men that he is here to talk over political matters with the military and civil officials. It appears that the Nanking representative has covered more ground this time than on his previous three visits.

CHIANG'S REPRESENTATIVE LEAVES FOR COLONY

BOATMEN LOSE THEIR LIVES IN SUDDEN SQUALL

RIVER TRAGEDY IN CANTON

NO TIME TO TAKE PRECAUTIONS

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.
Several small boats on the Canton River were upset by a sudden whirling squall and rain-storm, which broke at 5.45 p.m. yesterday. The wind and rain came so unexpectedly that there was no time for the boatmen to take precautions. Several of them were drowned, it is feared, as their craft capsized.

Little North suburb was again inundated by rainwater last night, and the residents there spent an uncomfortable night. It is a low-lying area and has no modern drainage to remove rain-water.

The East Creek is supposed to drain the rainwater in Little North suburb, but it rises and falls with the tide. Often refuse is thrown into the creek and lumber craft obstruct the passage of the water. The congestion helps the tide to inundate the low-lying area instead of draining away the sewage water.

A sum of $500,000 is required to widen and deepen the Creek, while adjoining owners can raise only a small part of the amount. The balance is obtained by imposing a 20 per cent. surcharge on the municipal land tax, which has been due and payable since January 1, 1935.

Construction work will start soon, following acceptance of the bids by several contracting firms.

DIAMONDS TAKEN FROM COURT

$300,000 Package Called For

SHANGHAI CASE ENDS

Shanghai, To-day.
The removal of some $300,000 worth of diamonds from the custody of the British police court brought to a close the case against Messrs. H. M. Gregory and F. R. Gabbott. Their release followed the return of Mr. J. B. Ipekjian, who called for the package. — Reuter.

A message dated July 9 stated that the charges of smuggling some $300,000 worth of diamonds into Shanghai, brought against J. B. Ipekjian, H. M. Gregory and F. R. Gabbott by the Chinese Maritime Customs, were dismissed with relation to the latter two defendants in His Majesty's police court that morning.

Magistrate Haines, however, ordered the diamonds to be held by the court pending the appearance of Ipekjian, then absent from Shanghai.

Counsel's application for costs on behalf of Gabbott and Gregory, on the ground that the accusations were malicious, frivolous and fictitious, was refused.

More Cheap Fare Trains?

The special cheap fare express service of the Kowloon-Canton Railway has proved such a successful scheme that the authorities of both the Chinese and British sections are contemplating putting an additional 60-cent fare express on the line in the near future.

Mr. R. D. Walker, manager of the British section, proceeded to Canton last Thursday to discuss the matter and, when interviewed by the China Mail yesterday, stated that the matter is still under discussion. He added that the result will be made known within a week or two.

ROUSING START IN SOUTH GERMANY

MOTORISED DEMONSTRATORS INFLAMMATORY SLOGANS

Munich, To-day.

South Germany's anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic campaign was given a rousing start by a six-hour parade of lorries loaded with shouting Storm Troopers.

Herr Hitler's Life Guards furnished 600 of the 1,100 motorised demonstrators, who roared: "Rome for all Papists! Palestine for all Jews! Germany for us! No further Semitic swines!" and similar slogans.

Pictures of bestial faced Jews attacking beautiful blonde German girls featured the procession. — Reuter.

APOLOGIES FROM SEATTLE

Mayor Sends Letter To Japanese Consul

Seattle, To-day.

The Mayor of Seattle has sent a letter to the Japanese Consul-General in connection with the club "rag" incident, when a representation was made of the Emperor of Japan pulling the Emperor of Ethiopia in a rickshaw, asking him "please to accept my assurance that the proceedings were not planned to bring reproach or ridicule upon His Majesty or your country."

"The offending incident did not occur at a city function but at a small community affair. It was conceived in a spirit of jocularity. That it should be otherwise interpreted is as regrettable as it is incorrect." — Reuter.

SECRET TREATY DENIED

ABYSSINIAN OFFER SAID OUT OF THE QUESTION

Rome, To-day.

"Quite unacceptable" was the comment of well-informed circles to the Emperor of Abyssinia's new suggestion to cede part of Ogaden in return for a loan and a port.

A message from Paris states that on the eve of Mr. Anthony Eden's arrival to represent Britain in the three-Power talk on Abyssinia, the Paris edition of the New York Herald publishes the details of a secret agreement between Britain and Italy, whereby Britain would recognise the exclusive Italian influence over south-western Abyssinia and support Italy's plan to build a railway linking Eritrea with Italian Somaliland. In return Italy would support Britain's special interest in Lake Tsana.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS WILCOX AVIATION BILL

Six Key Army Air Corps Bases To Guard Alaska And Canal

Washington, To-day.

President Roosevelt has signed the Wilcox Aviation Bill, authorising the construction of six key army air corps bases to guard Alaska and the Panama Canal.

The President recently explained that in signing the bill he would not necessarily recommend the immediate appropriation of all the funds necessary to put it into full operation, but he merely signed it to establish the future policy. — Reuter.

Reuter learns that while no such treaty exists, the British and Italian Governments in 1925 exchanged notes suggesting an agreement on the lines mentioned, and the possibility remains that this tentative Italo-British agreement will be advanced in the course of the Paris negotiations. — Reuter.

JOAN BLONDELL SEEKS DIVORCE

Barnes' 4th Marriage Jeopardised

EX-FOLLIES GIRL LEAVES MILLIONAIRE

Los Angeles, To-day.

The film star Miss Joan Blondell has filed a suit for divorce. She alleges that her husband, George Barnes, the film cameraman, did not speak to her for hours, drove an automobile while intoxicated, and ignored the guests at their home. Joan is asking for the custody of their son, born last November.

This is Barnes' fourth marriage. Miss Blondell has not been married previously.

Miss Nina Pierson, an ex-follies girl, has obtained a Mexican divorce from Paul Leviton, a millionaire business man. They were married in London last year and have just returned from their honeymoon, spent at Calcutta and Shanghai. — Reuter.

BRITISH OFFER IS AGAIN PRESENTED TO IL DUCE

FRENCH PRESS COMMENTS ON ABYSSINIAN PROPOSALS

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Paris, To-day.

The Emperor of Abyssinia's offer to meet Italy half way regarding territorial concessions if Abyssinia be given access to the sea and granted urgently needed loans, has revived the flickering hopes for a peaceful settlement of the conflict. It is generally assumed there that the Negus intentionally made the offer shortly before the opening of the three-Power conference, which is scheduled to get under way this week.

MORE MINISTERS RESIGN

WANG CHING-WEI ADHERENTS

Nanking, To-day.

Mr. Chen Kung-po, Minister of Industries, and Mr. Ku Meng-yu, Minister of Railways, both adherents of Mr. Wang Ching-wei, former President of the Executive Yuan, have resigned.

Other members of the Government who have previously resigned are Messrs. Wang Ching-wei, Ho Ying-ching and Chen Su-jen, Chairman of the Overseas Affairs Commission. — Reuter.

GENERALISSIMO CABLES WANG

Shanghai, Later.

According to the vernacular papers a high Government official in Nanking has received a private telegram from Chengtu stating that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has cabled Mr. Wang Ching-wei, strongly urging him to remain in office.

It is also stated that the Generalissimo has circulated all Cabinet Ministers, telling them to remain in office. — Reuter.

WEATHER REPORT

A weak anticyclone covers the Sea of Japan, and a ridge of moderately high pressure extends from Annam to the Caroline Islands.

A depression is situated over South-west Manchuria, moving north-eastward, and pressure is low over China generally. South-west winds, moderate, cloudy, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

"LEAVE POOR ABYSSINIANS IN PEACE"

RECEPTION HALL DAMAGED

Soldiers Called Out

Madrid, To-day.

A demonstration against the Italian Legation occurred at Lisbon, according to a message received here, yesterday.

A mysterious motor-car stopped in front of the Legation, while the occupants proceeded to hurl quantities of small stones into the reception hall, breaking the windows. The missiles were wrapped in Communist propaganda leaflets bearing the slogans "Leave the poor Abyssinians alone" and "Down with Fascism and cold-blooded murderers, peaceful people!"

A squad of soldiers was despatched to guard the Legation. — Reuter.

"JESUITIC FASCISM" IN FRANCE

Protest By Socialist Leader

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Paris, To-day.

In an article published by the Socialist organ Populaire, virulently attacking M. Laval's new emergency decrees, the Socialist leader, M. Leon Blum, refers to the "strange rumours" to the effect that M. Laval harbours more or less dictatorial intentions.

M. Blum demands an "unequivocal explanation," and then goes on to say: "We want to leave no doubt that the great masses of the workers, peasants and the entire French people will not permit Jesuitic Fascism on the Dollfus model to take root in France. We are, and remain, calm, but also determined." — Trans-Ocean Service.

IMPERIAL AIRWAYS EXPERIMENT

Problem Of Take-Off With Heavy Load

MAY REVOLUTIONISE LONG DISTANCE FLYING

London, To-day.

Imperial Airways have on order an experimental aircraft of a new type specially designed for the purpose of overcoming the problem of "take off" under a heavy load, which, if it proves successful in tests to be made before the middle of next year, will revolutionise long distance flying and bring nearer the possibility of a regular trans-Atlantic service.

The proposed aircraft, which is the invention of Major R. E. Mayo, consulting engineer to Imperial Airways, will consist of a large four-engine flying boat with a four-engine airplane mounted on its wings and interlocked with it so that the combined load is

Summer Styles From Home

Contrasting Fashion Features

CROCODILE WEAVING POPULAR

London. In London this summer's fashion features styles that are very dissimilar: on one hand there are the starched materials, and on the other, fabric that is elastic-like in nature. Crisp materials, however, best fulfil the requirements of the summer frock for formal occasions. A popular model is a dress of stiff muslin in sage green and white check with dull purple waistband clasped with a crystal buckle. The hat also is purple and green. In stiff materials organdie takes first place, but starched nets also are light and pretty for picture frocks. Pale blue and white is fresh and young looking, and black and white tartan is always smart. These nets compete in popularity with needle-run white organdie for blouses to wear with the summer coat and skirt. They are made with the frills or gauging so popular this season.

Crocodile Weaving

Crocodile weaving, or "skin effects," as they are called, are exclusively used for summer styles and appear either for evening, day or sports wear. For evening wear they are made up into the soft close-fitting dress trimmed with flowers or frills about the shoulders. For daytime wear they have invisible pleats and trimmings of a white organdie—by the way, white accessories for the day frock are more in evidence than ever this season in London. For sports or ordinary morning wear, one of these clinging materials is attractive in a check design woven in silk and cotton in uneven threads. The check about half an inch wide, is woven in a slightly deeper tone but so near in colour that at first sight the pattern scarcely noticeable.

Many Sources

Modern weaving has many resources to draw upon. One that is quite different from any other appears in a cotton thread that will not take dye interwoven with woollen yarn. When the cloth is dyed the cotton thread produces a light over-run effect that is very pleasing. Light woollen fabrics can be dyed any shade and still keep a whitish bloom. An attractive example is "Prisknya," which is woven with a cotton reserve. Another type of weaving for very light woollens is a lace effect or honeycomb weave which is quite transparent. These materials will be useful for beach wear.

SEARCH REMNANT COUNTERS

Excellent Bargains To Be Had

If one decides on a colour scheme of perhaps white and scarlet, white and blue or white and jade, and sets forth to hunt for these colours in the sales, many treasures of excellent quality will be found hidden upon the remnant counters. The price asked for each item may be negligible. Here is a scarlet and white scheme. The coat of scarlet, with cape sleeves, can be made from a yard and a half of 54in. wide material.

The white skirt would require the same amount, and a second length of about three-quarters of a yard would be enough for the smart top, which is cut low at the back. It is not necessary that it should be the same material as the skirt as long as it is the same shade of white.

Boldly spotted silk makes a smart belt and hat-band set, fastened with a matching buckle. A gilt ornament would be effective. Bangles and rings repeat the colours, and may be unbreakable composition. These can be bought for half their original cost.

Result—a smart and fresh looking, well-matched outfit at the expense of a little money and time well spent.

EASIER TO KEEP CLEAN

Waxing painted window sills every so often saves the appearance of the sills and makes it easier to keep them clean.

CARRY THE HEAD GRACEFULLY

Relaxed Neck Essential To Beauty

ELIMINATE TENSENESS AND KNOTS

A relaxed neck is essential to graceful carriage, poise and calm nerves. If the muscles in the back of your neck are tense and seem to be full of knots, the chances are that you will carry your head awkwardly, have headaches, and, occasionally, a bad disposition. And, as you well know, any of these ailments is apt to put lines across your brow or otherwise mar your beauty.

You should carry your head erect, chin up, not pulled in toward the throat—and shoulders straight, not forced stiffly back. If, when you wake up, there are twinges of pain or a sluggish feeling in your neck, try sleeping without a pillow; also do some simple relaxing exercises.

Neck Exercises

Sit in a straight chair with feet flat on the floor and hands folded in your lap. Let your head fall forward as far as it will go, making no attempt to force it downward toward your chest. Then swing it backward, relaxing your jaw so as not to strain and stretch the skin on your throat. Repeat 20 times. Best a few minutes.

Now, taking the original position, stiffen the muscles in your neck, turn your head to the left and, without moving shoulders, try to touch your left shoulder with your chin. Feel the muscles stretch and pull. Turn your head to the right and repeat. Then do the first exercise again. This time you'll notice that your head falls forward a good deal lower than it did at first.

Another Aid

Massage will help, too. The operator who gives you hot oil treatments should begin to massage upward from the space between shoulder blades to the crown of your head. Ask him to place his hands directly over your ears and to pull upward until your neck muscles feel stretched and relaxed.

FOR LONGER WEAR

A little talcum powder put on the hands or shaken inside rubber gloves makes them easier to put on and take off. Also using two pairs and alternating them, makes them last longer.

HOW TO PREVENT CRAMP

Water And Salt An Effective Cure

Some people suffer from cramp after a hard game of tennis or after too long a spell of rowing. This can often be prevented or alleviated by drinking water to which a little salt has been added. This does not sound a very attractive remedy. But a good deal of salt is lost in excessive perspiration, and too great a loss may lead to cramp of the muscles.

Salt, too, has an important part to play in the activity of those energy-producing glands, the suprarenals, and may be taken more freely at meal-times in the summer.

Overeating

Overloading the stomach with food is a bad thing at the best of times, but it is worse during this suddenly hot weather.

Meat leads to a greater immediate production of heat than other foods, and less should be eaten. The solid puddings which are a useful standby in the winter should be replaced by lighter sweets and fruit.

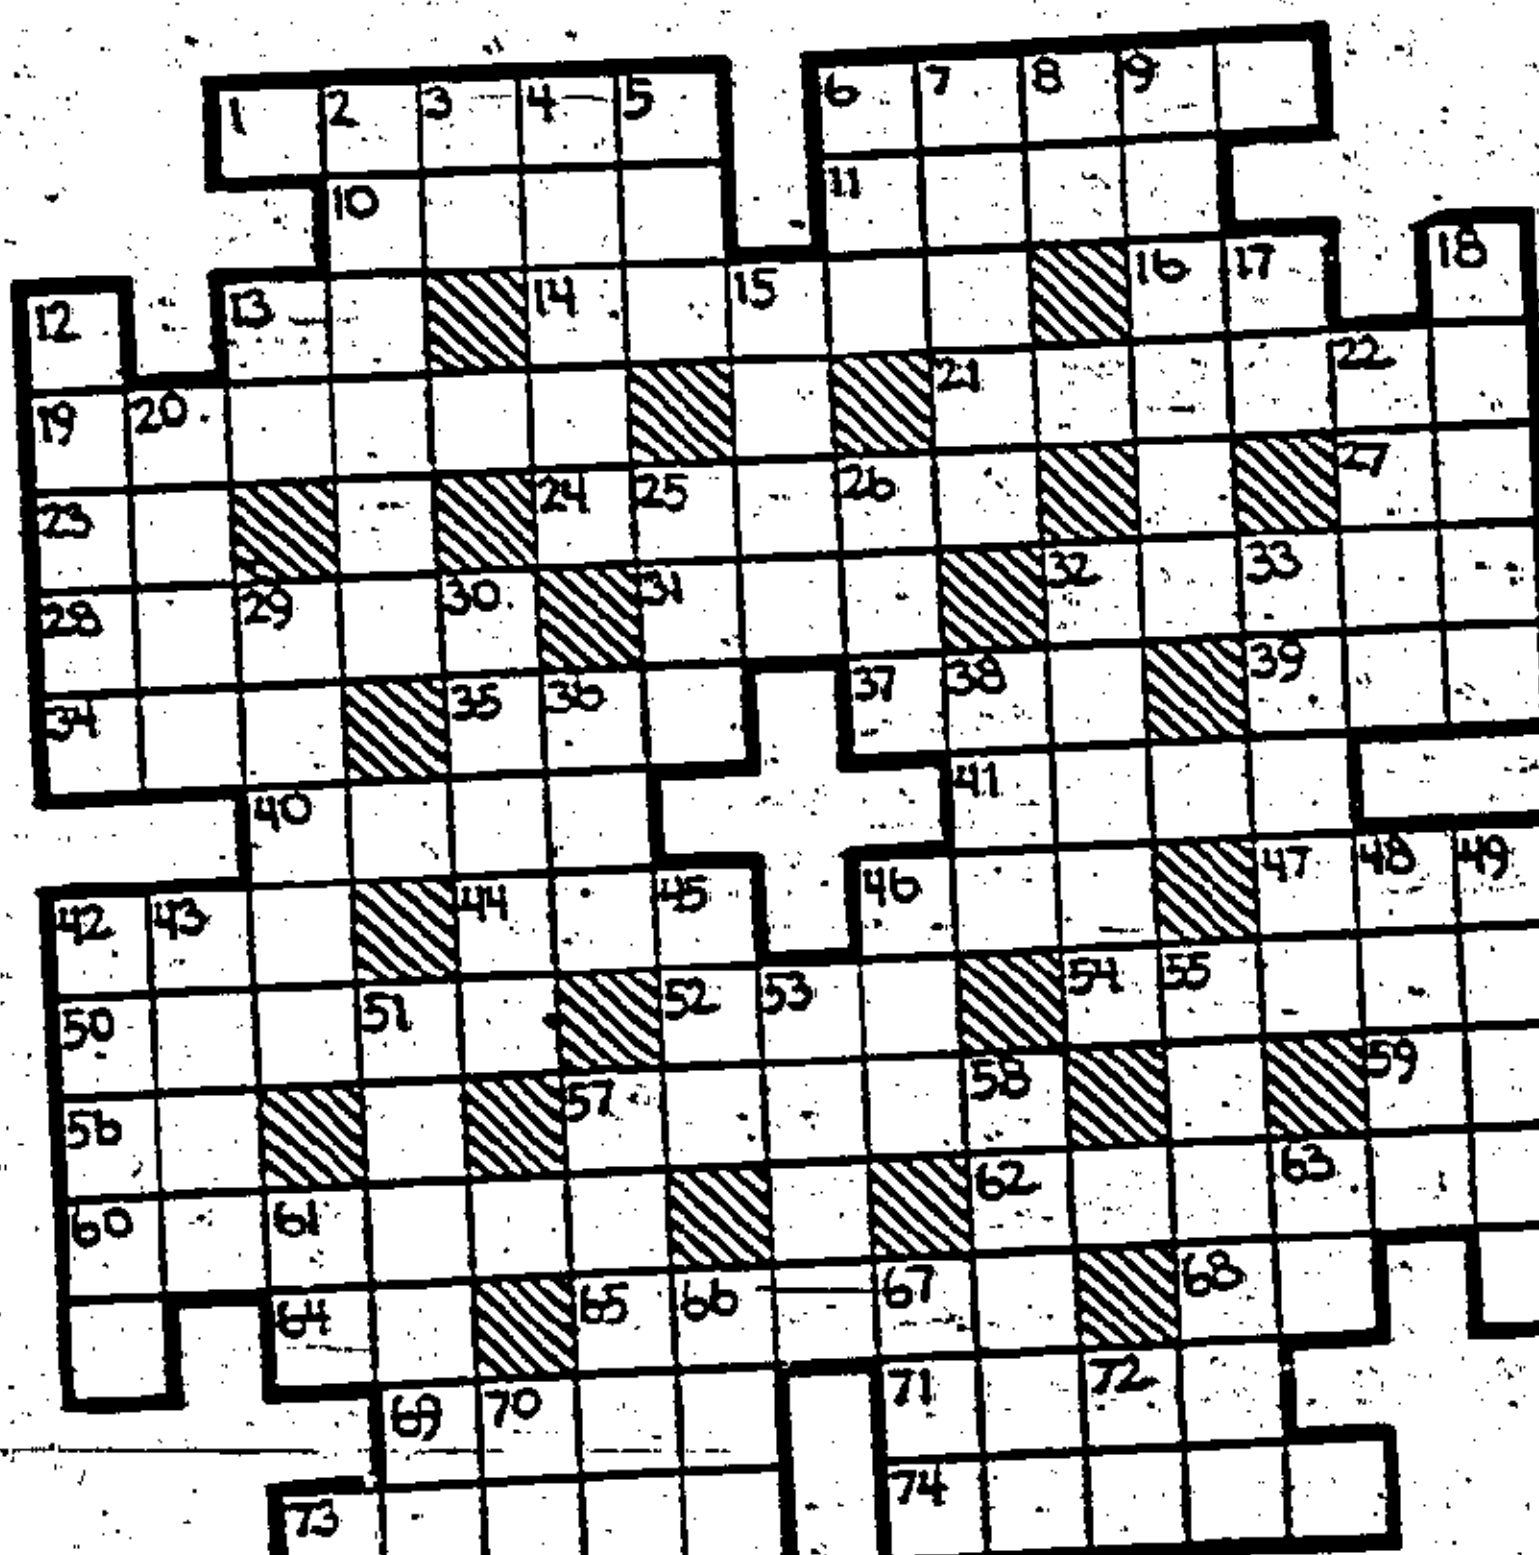

To drink a large quantity of liquid at a time leads generally to an uncomfortable feeling of fullness.

In hot weather it is better to drink small quantities of water or fruit drinks—at frequent intervals throughout the day. Any form of alcohol goes down better after the sun has set.

What must be a record interest in a sporting event has been established by Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise, for this year they did not miss a single day of the tennis championships at Wimbledon, but sat in the front seats of the Royal box every afternoon of the fortnight. Instead of going to have tea they often walked over to Court to see exciting matches, and they follow the careers of the leading players so closely that few competitors in the championships are unknown to them.

KWOK CHUN HANG TO GIVE EXHIBITION THIRD QUADRANGULAR SWIMMING MEETING

"Y" TO MEET MAK NGAH ASSOC. AT WATER-POLO

THE third of a series of quadrangular swimming contests between the European Y. M. C. A. and military teams will take place next Saturday night at the Y. M. C. A. pool, when the feature events of the evening will be an exhibition swim by Kwok Chun-hang, the Melbourne Centenary Breast Stroke champion, and a water-polo match between the "Y" and the Mak NGAH Association, which is comprised mostly of the star swimmers of the Kwangtung Athletic Association.

These quadrangular contests have so far produced excellent sport, but the coming Saturday night's contest is likely to eclipse all previous ones in view of the strong challenge from the Royal Engineers, who possess one of the finest collection of military swimmers in the Colony.

Kwok Chun-hang recently returned from a triumphant Australian tour, during which he captured the Melbourne Centenary 110 Yards Breast-Stroke Championship, the Victorian title for the same event, and climaxed his travels with a record-breaking swim at the Bonella Swimming Club when he was timed at 70 seconds over the 100 Yards.

Programme Alterations
In the quadrangular contest, the programme has been slightly altered from the last one. The quarter mile has been dropped and the 150 Yards Free Style and the 150 Yards Medley (Breast, Back and Free Styles) substituted.

In addition, there will be diving from the low board.
The following is the complete programme:
Members 50 Yards Agg. H'Cap.
Invitation 50 Yards Free Style.
Invitation 150 Yards Free Style.
Invitation Diving.
Invitation 300 Yards Relay.
Invitation 150 Yards Medley.
Exhibition Swim by Kwok Chun-hang.
Water-polo ("Y" v Mak NGAH Assoc.).

Tokyo Mayor Entertains American Aquatic Team

Tokyo, August 8.—The American swimming team, invading Japan last night, was honoured at a party given by Mayor Ushizuka of Tokyo, who arranged an artistic display of a large and valuable collection of wood prints.
Coach, Bob Kipnuth, said his proteges were in excellent condition and voiced the belief they would emerge winners over the Japanese, but by a small margin. He admitted, however, that the Japanese swimmers selected to meet the Americans, have shown daily improvement in their form. The tankers are scheduled to give exhibition performances in Nagoya to-night, thereafter proceeding to Osaka where they will shortly participate in an invitation and voiced the belief they would open meet—United Press.

GOLDMAN AND MISS HANCOCK DROP FIRST SET

WITHINGTONS AT THEIR BEST

FINCHER AND MISS GRIFFITHS OUTSTANDING PAIR

Playing their postponed Mixed Doubles League lawn tennis match, the United Services Recreation Club, holders of the Dunlop Mixed Doubles League Shield, yesterday avenged their earlier defeat at the hands of the K.C.C. "A" when they won by 5½ sets to 3½.

The outstanding feature of the match was the first defeat of the Colony Mixed Doubles champions, L. Goldman and Miss R. Hancock who succumbed to E. F. Fincher and Miss M. Griffiths after 12 games.

The K.C.C. first string, E. C. Fincher and Miss O. Dalziel, were outclassed, with the exception of one match when they beat Tollinton and Miss H. Hancock.

Runners-up

The U.S.R.C., although they have yet one outstanding fixture against the Chinese Recreation Club, the 1935 champions are assured of being joint runners-up position by virtue of their win man's surprisingly weak service.

E. F. Fincher and Miss Griffiths produced their best tennis this season and settled down quickly. They combined well and both took advantage of Goldman's surprisingly weak service.

Miss Hancock, on the other hand, was at the top of her form and was easily head and shoulders above the rest of the ladies on display.

ARMY WIN OVER K. B. G. C.

Losers' Spirited Resistance

In spite of a plucky resistance, the Kowloon Bowling Green Club were beaten by 6½ sets to 2½ in the "D" Division of the Lawn Tennis League when they met the Army Tennis Club at King's Park yesterday.

The outstanding players for the Army were A. Warr and B. Peckham, who were mainly responsible for their victory.

P.G.A. APPEAL FOR FUNDS

The Professional Golfers' Association, who are appealing for £300 to complete a fund of £3,300 to meet the expenses of sending ten players and the manager to America to compete for the Ryder Cup next month, point out that the team will be the guests of the American P. G. A. for two days only and that for the rest of the time they will pay their own way out of the £300 allotted to each man.

Madison Square Garden Plans Three Title Bouts

New York.—Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden's matchmaker who pulled off the Jimmy Braddock coup (he picked Braddock to beat Baer) and thus got his contract renewed when things looked dark for him, has a brand new promotional stunt up his sleeve.
Johnston is trying to line up no less than three championship matches, all on the same gigantic outdoor card, all for 15 rounds. The titles he would put up for dispute on that momentous evening are lightweight, represented by Tony Canzoneri, featherweight, Freddie Miller, returning from a grand triumphant tour of England and bentam, with the sensational Cuban, Sir Escobar, as the titlist of record. BLACK BOMBER'S CONTEMPT

FIGHT OVER IN 2 MINUTES AND 21 SECONDS

LOSER'S ONE GLANCING BLOW

(By "BERNARD LITZEL")

Comiskey Park, Chicago, Aug. 7.

KINGFISH Levinsky, one of the toughest men in heavyweight boxing, landed but one glancing blow throughout his brief engagement with Joe Louis, the "Black Menace" in their climination clash last Thursday.

Louis, generally known as a "dead pan" one who shows no signs of emotion on his face while in action, could not control his contempt for the Chicagoan, who quit all pretense of fighting after the first terrific left hook to the jaw.

The fight opened with both sparring cautiously for openings. One minute later Louis went into action. He swung a left and right with cobra-like swiftness and deadliness, and Levinsky collapsed like a pricked balloon.

Levinsky came up at the count of four, arising painfully. Thereafter he virtually ran as Louis unhurriedly shuffled in and deliberately crashed a poisonous right to the button. Levinsky crashed for the second time. He dropped in his own corner and hauled himself automatically up by the ropes. There he sat for a few seconds, mumbling to himself.

The "Kill"

Then he wobbled all the way to his feet and plunged straight into a merciless and terrific cross-fire as the youthful Negro went after the "kill."

A terrific blow to the head dropped Levinsky for the third time in less than a minute and a half. He went down on his knees, his gloves covering his face in mute appeal.

"Don't let him hit me again," I'm through," the Chicago former fish peddler begged the referee. Louis stood immobile, hardly a bead of perspiration on his brown body. His "dead pan" face was expressionless throughout the brief encounter.

Referee Norman McGarrity took one look at the Kingfish, then halted the slaughter, awarding the verdict to Louis.

Levinsky, in his dressing room, attempted no alibi. "Louis hits harder than any man I ever met," he asserted.

"Will Kill Baer"

"He'll kill Max Baer if they ever meet."

One thousand policemen and three detective squads patrolled the stadium for an hour before the fight.

The authorities took all precautions to prevent possible racial trouble, as was done in New York when Louis clashed with Primo Camera.

WARWICKSHIRE BEATEN

Bowes Gives Yorkshire 10 Wickets Win

11 FOR 81 AT BRADFORD

London, To-day.

Yorkshire secured their third successive win in the County Cricket Championship yesterday after only two days' play, when they beat Warwickshire by 10 wickets, at Bradford.

Bowes' best feats this season have been:

7 for 89 v Glamorgan
13 for 88 v Worcester
16 for 35 v Northants
7 for 58 v Essex
5 for 54 v Surrey
6 for 42 v Kent
12 for 99 v Lancashire
11 for 81 v Warwickshire

This was Warwickshire's third successive defeat—they lost to Derbyshire and to the South Africans, although they took first innings' points from Yorkshire in their first encounter at Edgbaston.

Scores, as cabled by Reuter, were:—
Yorkshire beat Warwickshire by 10 wickets at Bradford.
York: 354 and 4 for 0.
Warwick: 105 (Bowes 6 for 32) 250 (Bowes 5 for 49).

MANILA ARMY-NAVY "Y'S" DISTINCTION PENTATHLON AQUATIC CONTEST VICTORY SWIMMER SHATTERS TWO TIMES

Manila, August 8.

THE Fort William McKinley Army Y.M.C.A. has just been notified that their team won the 1935 Army-Navy Y.M.C.A. Radio Swimming Pentathlon. This annual event is one of the most unique competitions in the Y.M.C.A.'s varied programme of athletic events.

It is open to all Army-Navy Y.M.C.A.'s of the world. Each team races in five events in its own pool, and radios, cables, or telegraphs the results to the headquarters of the Army-Navy Y.M.C.A. in New York City. There a committee receives the results and announces the championship team.

A three-year cup is offered for competition by the Pentathlon Committee. It has been held in Honolulu for a number of years, but will be shipped to Fort William McKinley for the first time in the near future.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS FINISH IN TOKYO BAY SWIM

To Undergo Intensive Training
For Berlin Olympiad

Tokyo, Aug. 8.

Two middle school girls, one 12 and the other 14, to-day were the sole finishers in the annual 20-mile student swim across Tokyo Bay.

Eight other entrants, including four boys, were exhausted before the finish and took refuge in accompanying boats. The winners will probably undergo intensive training as Olympic possibilities.

UNOFFICIAL TEST AGAINST
JAPAN'S SECOND STRING

Tokyo, Aug. 7.

Such American tank luminaries as Jimmy Gilhula, Ralph Flanagan, Jack Medina and Peter Fick, members of the United States team that will clash with the All-Japan squad on August 17, will make their initial appearance in Nagoya to-morrow, it was learned.

Following their exhibitions the Americans will leave immediately for Osaka where, on August 11, they are scheduled to participate in an invitation open meet.

Unofficial Test

These results, however, will be unofficial. They will not count in the final reckoning of the three-day Japanese-American meet to start here August 17.

Gilhula is spending his spare time in studying old Japanese masters, it was learned. He revealed he has studied Japanese wood-block prints for many years.

Coach Bob Kipphut declared to-day his boys, "realize there's a tough task ahead." The lads are keeping themselves in perfect condition, Kipphut asserted.—United Press.

LOCATELLI WHIPS HARRY DUBLINSKY

Italian Lightweight In Line For Title

New York, Aug. 6.

Cleto Locatelli, the Italian lightweight champion, won a close decision here to-night from Harry Dublinsky, and moved a step nearer a battle with Tony Canzonieri, with the latter's crown at stake.

The Associated Press scorecard gave Locatelli five of the 10 rounds, Dublinsky four and one even.

Canzonieri became the first scrapper in the 50 years history of the lightweight division to regain the 125-pound title when he beat Lou Amber here on May 11. He beat Locatelli in 12 rounds here on February 2 last year and has both won from Dublinsky and lost to the Chicagoan. He won a decision from Locatelli also in 1933.—Associated Press.

The Fort William McKinley team this year grossed 22,884 points, the highest score ever made by any team since the event was started 12 years ago. The local Army swimmers won this year's championship by a margin of 9,494 points. Honolulu took second place with a total of 13,333 points.

Breaks Two Records

Jikirim Adjaluddin, Company K, 45th Infantry (PS), gave a remarkable performance by scoring 4,603 points in the five events, breaking records in the 100-yard free-style and 100-yard breast-stroke races. Adjaluddin holds pentathlon records in two of the other events, the 220-yard free style and the 50-yard back-stroke.

Teofilo Ydefonso, Company G, 57th Infantry (PS), was second in total points, and W. Waidlesch of Honolulu third. The records for the five events now stand as follows:

50-Yard Free-Style: W. Waidlesch, Honolulu, and H. Kim, Balboa (Tied) 24 1/5 seconds.
100-Yard Free-Style: J. Adjaluddin, Fort William McKinley, 54 2/5 seconds.
200-Yard Free-Style: J. Adjaluddin, Fort William McKinley, 2 minutes, 22 3/5 seconds.
50-Yard Back-Stroke: J. Adjaluddin, Fort William McKinley, 29 1/5 seconds.
100-Yard Breast-Stroke: J. Adjaluddin, Fort William McKinley, 1 minute, 7 4/5 seconds.

U.S.R.C. AVENGE DEFEAT BY K.C.C.

Miss Griffiths was her usual cool self and displayed plenty of power in her forehand shots, while her backhand showed improvement.

In direct contrast, Miss O. Dalziel was the weakest of the K. C. C. ladies, particularly on her backhand shots, which invariably went out of court or else ended in the net.

Miss H. Hancock, who made her League debut this season, played a cool game, but it was evident that she has yet to strike her best form.

Ernie Fincher Shines

Ernie Fincher was really outstanding, being deadly overhead and his volleying superb at times. Miss A. Mackenzie also showed up well, displaying some fine all-round shots.

Major and Mrs. R. L. Withington, who were among the leading mixed doubles pairs last season, were the best home pair, Mrs. Withington excelling in terrific forehand drives, while she has lost none of her sting in other departments.

BLACK BOMBER'S CONTEMPT

Each detachment of police was armed with revolvers, tear gas bombs and a brace of submachine guns.

Although the 20-year-old Negro entered the ring a 5-2 favorite, and the majority of sports experts picked him to whip Levinsky via the short route, few expected it so early in the proceedings.

The win definitely established Louis as probably the world's outstanding heavyweight to-day, and simultaneously eliminated Levinsky from further consideration.

He is only 17 years old, but Ralph Flanagan, the Miami high school swimming marvel, is the star of the American team now in Japan. Ralph took the measure of Jack Medina, Seattle world record holder, in the 380 Yards Free Style as well as the Mile at the A.A.U. meet in Detroit.

Sports Chatter

(By "GEOFFREY SIMPSON")

London, July 12.

THE biggest honour in cycle racing, the world amateur sprint championship, will be raced for on behalf of Britain this year by Dennis Horn, brilliant Norwich all-rounder, and E. W. Higgins, of Manchester.

The invitations have just been sent out by the N.C.U., the racing being fixed for next month in Brussels, and Higgins and Horn will, of course, be delighted to accept.

There will be no quarrel with their selection. Horn seems to be about the best sprinter on the track nowadays. He is a smart skater, too, though not so good a one as his brother, C. W. Horn, who made a clean sweep of the last amateur events at Lingay Fen.

As for Higgins, he won the sprint title at the last Empire Games.

COZENS GOING

THE steep banking of the Brussels track may handicap them a bit, because we have no tracks in England which follow the Continental style.

But with a little luck in running they may do surprisingly well, for both have a strong burst of finishing speed.

Horn is probably riding as well now as S. T. Cozens did as an amateur—and the former Manchester Wheeler was twice second in this world event.

Cozens will be the professional sprinter of the British team, and the Londoner, Harry Grant, will do the motor-paced riding, at which he has no superior in the world.

SURPRISE CHOICE

THE experiments with massed start cycling made at such places as Brooklands motor track and Donnington Park have, I think, improved the chances of our road team.

This will be formed by the Midlanders, C. Holland and P. T. Stallard, and Luke Youll, of Newcastle.

This last-named young man is the surprise selection of the team. He has had no experience of international racing, but he has got to start sometime.

At Donnington Youll shocked all the fancied riders by his staying power. He may shock the foreigners too.

Holland's chance sticks out. He was third in the last world road race, when few people expected any Englishman to get in the first six.

RACING IN COMFORT

Any official people in racing were at Northolt Park on Wednesday night, seeing pony-racing for the first time, the meeting must have been a real eye-opener for them.

A crowd of 20,000, all comfortably housed, gathered in the enclosure, and even those who backed losers seemed well pleased with the sport.

Incidentally, they did a fine turn

GREAT COLT RETIRES AFTER TRIUMPH WINDSOR LAD'S WIN IN THE "ECLIPSE" FINE STUD CAREER PROMISED

(By Hotspur)

London, July 20.

FEW horses have ever left the Turf for the stud under fairer conditions than has Windsor Lad, who ended a racing career of the highest distinction by winning the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown Park yesterday. The public paid him its last tribute by round after round of applause when he had passed the judge a gallant winner by three parts of a length and the same from the Aga Khan's Theft and Mr. Arthur Dewar's Fair Trial.

There was such cheering as is seldom heard after the Eclipse, with all the great finishes it has produced—such as the epic struggle of Ard Patrick and Sceptre, the dead-heat of Lemberg and Neil Gow, and the stirring contest between Lally and Sancy.

Yesterday's was one of those spontaneous tributes that the public never omits to pay to superlative merit in a racehorse, and the cheering was renewed when Mr. Benson led his horse into the unsaddling enclosure.

Only the brilliance of Windsor Lad relieved the race from being a humdrum affair, for all round it was not one of the best Eclipses that we have seen, nor was it the best of days, for the sky was overcast and there was a sharp shower of rain as the horses were in the paddock before the race.

There were only five runners, it having been decided to reserve Hainan for the Atlantic Cup at Liverpool next week so that the Aga Khan was represented only by Theft, the very gallant little colt who only goes under to the best three-year-old, or the best four-year-old in England. Oddly enough, in spite of the sterling performances that Theft has given every time he has come on a race-course, it was not he but Fair Trial that was second favourite.

Fair Trial Backed

Fair Trial had won his only two races, but these, even with his pull in the weights, did not seem to put him in the Windsor Lad class or even in the Theft class, yet the public seemed to prefer the paddock stories about his being the same as Montrose at events, that Fred Darling thought him a better horse than his Derby winner, Cameroun, and so on—to the public record of Theft.

The only fear that one could have about Windsor Lad was that it might be a muddling, badly run race, and that a speedy colt like

WHO'S GOING TO WIN 1936 OLYMPIC SPRINTS

Eddie Tolan Predicts
Another Negro

Defeat. Eddie Tolan, 1932 Olympic's double sprint champion back from Australia, says he knows who's going to win the 1936 Olympic sprints—and that it'll be an American negro, but not Ralph Metcalfe or Willis Ward.

That would seem to leave it up to Jesse Owens, Ohio State's sophomore sensation. Or Columbia's Ben Johnson, or Temple's Eulace Peacock.

WORLD'S STUDENTS' OLYMPIAD

FIRST MEETING
STARTS TO-DAY

JAPANESE HOPES FOR LAURELS

The first World Students' Olympiad commences at Budapest this afternoon, when practically every nation in the world will be represented.

The Olympiad will continue for five days, and, among the many competing contingents is a very strong one from Japan, who have bright hopes of capturing the laurels.

Following this, Olympiad, the Japanese group will participate in meets in Berlin, Paris and Zurich, Switzerland, returning to Japan late next month.

The Japanese group of 15 athletes, who are led by Dr. Tadaoki Yamamoto, consists of outstanding Japanese student athletes, many of whom took part in the 1932 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

The Team Members

The team includes four jumpers: Naohito Tajima, whose best performances are—broad jumps 7.55 metres and hop-step-jump 15.5 metres; Masao Harada, who broad-jumped 7.59 metres in the hop-step-jump; Hiroshi Tanaka, 19 years old, who high-jumps 1.95 metres; and Yoshiro Asaguma, whose marks are 2 metres in the high jump and 7.41 metres in the broadjump.

There are two pole-vaulters in the team: Shunhei Nishida and Hideo Oe, both of whom have done 4.20 metres. The outstanding sprinter is Mitsuo Taniguchi, who hung up marks of 10.4 sec. in the 100 metres and 21.2 sec. in the 200 metres event.

NEW COLUMBIA AND REGAL-ZONO RECORDS FOR AUGUST ARRIVED

CAPT. EYSTON CHALLENGES COBB'S RECORD MONTLHERY BID FOR HONOURS ONLY TWO FOREIGN TITLE HOLDERS

London, July 20.

British speed aces are engaged in a dramatic battle for world car records. Mr. John Cobb ended a triumphant run in America yesterday morning in which he set up a 24 hours record of 134.7 m.p.h. or 3,235 miles, and beat all the world records between 50 and 4,000 kilometres and those from one hour to 24 hours.

Twelve hours later his feat was challenged by Mr. G. E. Eyston and Mr. A. Denly. These two drivers set out on the Montlhery (France) track in a two-litre Hotchkiss.

Eyston and Denly had actually gone to France to attack the 48-hour record of 109.45 m.p.h. set up on the same track last year by the French trio, Perrot, Dhorne, and Girard, in a Delahave.

New Records

Up to an early hour this morning Eyston had set up two records for Class E cars during his first stretch at the wheel: 500 kilometres in 2hr. 46min. 2.1sec., average speed 112.272 m.p.h.; and 542.775 kilometres in 3 hours, average speed of 112.421 m.p.h.

The only world car records now held by foreign countries, writes our Motoring Correspondent, are the standing start kilometre and standing start mile, held by von Stuck (Auto-Union) and Carracciola (Mercedes) respectively; and the "freak" long-distance records, from two to 60 days, and from 4,000 to 300,000 miles held in France.

EXTRAORDINARY HORSE RACE ANIMALS FOALED ON SAME DAY CHAMPION JOCKEY ENGAGED TWO YEARS AHEAD

London, July 21.

An unusual race will be run at Newmarket to-day, as the last on the programme.

This is a private match between two horses that were born on the same day at the same stud and are now the property of two different owners.

Mr. Z. G. Michalinos's Zelmos and Mrs. W. Raphael's Picasso, now two years old, were foaled at Lord Derby's Hillside Stud, near Newmarket.

Nearly A Record

When their present owners heard of this, about a week afterwards, they immediately decided to match them during their first season.

Mrs. Raphael set up something of a record by engaging the champion jockey, Gordon Richards, to ride Picasso for a race to be run two years ahead.

But Zelmos was favourite in the betting.

Batting first, Yorkshire compiled a total of 354, and then dismissed Warwickshire for 105 runs, Bowes taking 6 for 32 to enforce the follow-on. In Warwickshire's second innings of 250 Bowes had 5 for 49 to give him 11 for 81 in the match.

Yorkshire secured the necessary four runs without loss for a 10 wickets victory.

CHARGE AGAINST LOCAL DOCTOR

Alleged Negligence

PLAINTIFF UNDER STIFF CROSS-EXAMINATION

Extraordinary interest was yesterday manifested by the public at the hearing of the summons before Mr. Schofield against Dr. Arthur W. Woo, senior partner of the Woo Clinic, China Buildings, for alleged wilful neglect and exposure of a child patient, many members of the medical profession being present.

The allegations against the defendant are that he refused to call in a second opinion and that he removed the child from the Woo Nursing Home, Babington Path, to the French Hospital, when she was in a dangerous condition, without consulting another opinion.

Mr. John S. H. Woon, Chinese Secretary to the Italian Consulate, complainant in the case, underwent searching cross-examination, by Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., who is conducting the defence, instructed by Mr. G. K. Hall Brutton, of Messrs. G. K. Hall Brutton and Company.

Mr. E. S. C. Brooks, of Hastings and Company, appeared for the prosecution.

At the outset of Mr. Jenkin's cross-examination, Mr. Brooks, for plaintiff, objected, to which Mr. Jenkin replied that he was going to follow it right up to the hilt and would presently ask the Magistrate to entirely disbelieve the witness, for reasons he would give, and the reason why the charge was launched by the witness would, he hoped, come out in cross-examination.

Mr. Brooks then asked that the questions be reserved, as he strongly objected to questions of such a kind going in.

Mr. Schofield suggested that the questions be held over, to which Mr. Jenkin agreed.

Plaintiff's Admissions

Under cross-examination plaintiff admitted that on the day of the admission of the child to the Nursing Home she was at first seen by two doctors and in the evening by five.

Six different doctors attended your child on the first day after admission? — Yes.

Do you know that during your child's stay in the Nursing Home, she was seen by seven doctors? — Yes.

Who attended her about forty times? — Yes. May be.

Pretty careful, wasn't it? — Yes.

You wanted Professor Gerrard? — Yes.

Dr. Woo said Professor Gerrard could not attend because he was ill in hospital? — Yes.

Do you know that Dr. Woo went to see Professor Gerrard in hospital, and discussed your child's case with him? — I don't know. It comes as a surprise to me.

Mr. Jenkin: Was not neglecting your child very much at that period, was he? — No reply.

Further Consultations

Mr. Jenkin: Do you know that on the same day Dr. Woo visited Professor Gerrard he also visited Dr. Montgomery at the Matilda Hospital, and consulted with him? — I don't know.

Mr. Jenkin: You attach very great competence to Dr. Montgomery's status here, don't you? — I don't quite catch you. Dr. Montgomery only advised me at the French Hospital.

You were thankful for his advice? — Yes.

You still would rely entirely on any course he suggested was the right one? — Yes.

On the first day that Dr. Montgomery called, which was July 22, Dr. Woo had gone to Canton to perform an operation? — I don't know.

Do you know that he left instructions that Dr. Montgomery should be called in instantly if required? — I don't know.

On Saturday, July 21, did you occasion to be published in the press in the Colony a notice, thanks to Dr. Montgomery for his devotion, care and interest in your child's case? — Yes.

After further cross-examination of the plaintiff, the case was adjourned until 2.30 p.m. to-morrow.

THE JUDGE'S JOKE

Not Seen By Man Who Stole Wife's False Teeth

Chicago.

"Give them back at once," ordered Judge Thomas Green, sternly.

William Larson fished in his pocket and produced his wife's false teeth.

"It was just a joke," he explained.

His wife had alleged that besides stealing her teeth he had beaten her.

"Now I'll have one," observed the Judge. "You're fined $40 and costs."

NEW YORK GOING CONTINENTAL

Sidewalk Cafe Idea

GREAT SUCCESS ON FIRST NIGHT OF OPENING

New York.

Times-Square is going Continental—one of the results of the repeal of Prohibition.

In other words, its first sidewalk cafe has been opened to the public.

The first night was a gala night. Twenty-four green and orange tables seating 96 persons were placed in a strip of sidewalk, enclosed by boxwood hedges extending 80 ft. on the south side of Forty-second street from Seventh-avenue to Broadway.

Four green and orange-striped awnings illuminated at night covered the terrace which has been named the Cross-road Cafe.

Chorus Girls

Among the stage stars who were seen at the tables on the opening night were Tallulah Bankhead, Victor Moore, Ruth Weston and Walter Pidgeon, while a number of Earl Carroll's famous chorus girls added to the glamour of the surroundings.

300 RESCUES AT SEA

Dutch Seaman's 80th Birthday

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Amsterdam, To-day. More than 300 persons owe their lives to an old seaman named Hendriks-Ostenberg, who has just celebrated his 80th birthday in his home in the Dutch naval port of Van Helder.

Mentally alert and physically still active, the octogenarian is famous all over Holland as the holder of what may well be a record for saving life at sea. The register of the Dutch Lifeboat Society credits Ostenberg with 150 verified rescues of shipwrecked persons at the risk of his own life during his 50 years' service, but an unofficial estimate puts the real figure at over 300.

The lusty old lifesaver was the recipient of many presents and marks of esteem in his honour on the occasion of his 80th birthday.—Trans-Ocean Service.

The s.s. Benavon is due here from Singapore next Saturday.

Mr. G. P. Freeman, of the Furness Co., arrived in the Colony this morning from Singapore by the m.v. Yasakuni Maru.

INCREASING USE OF ELECTRICITY

Great Expansion In England

FIGURES DOUBLED IN TEN YEARS

The Minister of Transport, partly by force of circumstances, has had to devote a great deal of his attention to road transport since he assumed office; his public connection with electricity supply has therefore been less close than that of his predecessor but one.

It is hardly necessary to add that he has not endeared himself in this way to all classes of road users and that the criticisms that have been levelled at him have exceeded in volume and point those which were directed against Mr. Morrison when he took up the cudgels on behalf of electrical development.

Minister's Speech

It is, perhaps, for this reason that in proposing the toast of "The British Electrical Development Association" at the annual luncheon of that body which was held at the Savoy Hotel, London, recently Mr. Hore-Belisha devoted portions of his speech to both subjects. He congratulated himself on having under his supervision two modern and most progressive industries.

The motor industry, he said, had doubled itself within ten years, and if it continued at the same pace for the next ten years there would be no pedestrians left. Incidentally, the pressure which had been brought upon him by another class of road user, viz. cyclists, had decided him to inaugurate special tracks for their use.

The electrical industry had also doubled during the last ten years and its prospects were illimitable. The Government had organised the production side, but had left the distributors to do their share in making it the greatest industry in the country. He wished them the greatest success in their endeavours.

President's Reply

The president (Alderman Sir Percival Bower), in reply, gave some account of what the association was doing by means of Press advertising and films to increase the consumption of electricity.

In this connection, he pointed out that it was a fallacy to suppose that money spent in this way raised the price of the commodity. (Continued on Page 11)

Relief Workers Strike

The strike of men employed on the works started at Los Angeles and elsewhere to relieve unemployment, which are to be financed partly by an increased taxation of the rich and partly by an enormous pledging of Government credit, are actual enough as events, and yet they are a contradiction in terms. A strike is effective something to give that the other wants; apart from any feeling of goodwill which may lead to a reasonable compromise, the victory is won by the party which can best do without what the other side offers. Usually it is a case of work versus cash; on the most selfish principles a worker is ill-advised to strike unless the employer is anxious to get work to take advantage of a rising market. A strike against receiving pay when no orders are coming in leaves the employer quite unconcerned—at least, any employer except the State.

The State, which really consists simply of the citizens, employed or unemployed, has for the nonce to be considered as a separate entity with an individuality of its own; and its position—in this matter is weaker than that of the private employer in two ways. The first is that the striker is also a voter, and can influence the State in his own interests when election time comes along; the second is that in all the English-speaking countries it has been adopted as a principle, since the days of Queen Elizabeth's Poor Law, that no citizen shall be allowed to come to starvation. There is nothing irrelevant about judging this controversy in the light of old history, for men have always needed food, and most men have had to work for it. Also at all times there have been some who have failed to find work, and human nature is very constant. The old system then, which worked well enough for a couple of centuries, was entirely local. Relief was administered by the parish constable under the control of the Justices of the Peace, and paid for out of the local rates. It had the advantage of complete local, and personal knowledge; it kept the worker in his own home; it was the obvious interest of the ratepayers to find the work and pay for it rather than merely increase the rates. The disadvantages were an inescapable dependence on the property owners, and a tendency to depress the wage for the periods of employment to a level which was inadequate to support the labourer's household for the whole year. These defects were fatal when growing industries offered a better career; but the new system, elaborately based on the idea that the acceptance of relief should be made as unattractive as possible, was far less human. The abolition of outside relief and compulsory internment in huge barracks for the miserable was simply a coercion of the poor to accept any pay, however far below the subsistence wage. The idea that involuntary poverty was a crime, or at least that it should be treated as such, became intolerable to all humane men, and the next stage was the spread of the doctrine of "the right to work." Labour bureaux and relief works are an indication that that "right" as been admitted in a half-hearted sort of way. At the present juncture the most debatable questions are: Has the out-of-work man a right to dictate what sort of work he shall do? and must he be paid at the same rate as a man employed on remunerative production? And if he refuses to work at "subsistence wage" lower than the Union rate, has he a right to a subsistence wage without working?

These are fundamental questions that will make the politics of all the English-speaking countries for the next twenty years. Our Governments may well regret the personal knowledge of the old parish constable; for it is the simple fact that men cannot be treated as arithmetical units. Just as there are differences between men, so are there differences between relief schemes. There is for instance the great "T.V.A.," only possible when backed by national resources, by which the waters that have been running to waste in the Tennessee Valley are impounded for cheap electric power, to be used both for irrigation of waste lands and for various industries for which raw hands will be trained. Any answer to the questions, which is a plain "yes" or "no" will be wrong, and lead to trouble. There is a field in which the State can do useful work without direct competition with the private employers; but it will have to be thought out carefully. The State has also a function as arbiter between the public consumer and the manufacturer and the worker, the guiding lines of which have never been thought out. Both laissez faire and the Soviet system are merely amateur solutions.

Payment for work done is better than mere largesse; and the illusion that there is some where an inexhaustible supply of wealth that can be drawn

Conservative supporters of the Government are rapidly drawing level with the outdoor organisations of the Socialists, who for many years had almost a monopoly of this form of propaganda.

Many Carrier Pigeons Lost
In Lympne-Berlin Race

Berlin, To-day.—The great majority of the German carrier pigeon fanciers who entered birds in Saturday's race from Lympne, on the south coast of England, to Berlin, are still anxiously awaiting the arrival of their pigeons, only 20 out of a total of 1,200 having reached their destination up to yesterday morning. The others having probably been driven off their course by the strong wind upon without renewal to a complete misunderstanding of what capital means. "It is not really anything but the right to decide how future wealth shall be used."

BIG BUSINESS AND MONEY-MAKING

MAN CANNOT SERVE BOTH GOD
AND MAMMON

(By Very Rev. W. R. Inge)

LONG ago, when Mr. Holloway of the Pills died, his obituary notice in the Times contained the following remarkable passage: "Money-making is an art by itself; it demands for success the devotion of the whole man. Sleeping or waking his thoughts must be devoted to it. It is not everyone who is capable of such single-hearted attention as this. Most men wish to be wealthy, but with a want of steadiness and single-mindedness of purpose. Politics or love are great things to them; they are not willing to give them up just as so many snare by which the path of money-making is beset."

We cannot serve God and Mammon, as a great authority told us two thousand years ago, when trade and commerce were very simple affairs compared with what they are to-day. Mammon, the writer of the obituary notice, though, is as exacting a master as his rival, Samuel Butler characteristically says that no doubt it is difficult to serve both; but everything that is worth doing is difficult. Is it only difficult, or is it impossible?

Earlier Views
The money-making life has not always been held up to admiration. The Greeks thought it a legitimate career, but not one that an educated gentleman would care for. The early Church held the curious view that money is "naturally barren," so that there is something unnatural in making it breed. The Jews, of course, made it breed, but they were not Christians.

The Christian noble, if he wanted money, might set up as a robber baron, or by way of mild reminders that he needed coin, the knight Day by day extracted grinders from the howling Israelite.

There were prosperous merchants in the Middle Ages, and they were respected. But the modern business man has his spiritual home in Calvinism, which has had a very important influence upon the social and economic state of Europe.

Church's Attitude
The Church hitherto had not been quite easy in its mind about private property. If a man had not fallen into sin, there would be no law, no armies, and no private property. These institutions belong not to the absolute Law of Nature, but to the relative Law of Nature, which we have to accept only because we are in a fallen state.

But Calvin swept away this distinction; private property now becomes, without qualification, part of the divine law. He was convinced that Christianity is compatible with industrialism and capitalism, and that this type of civilisation is, or may be, more Christian than the feudalism and militarism of the Middle Ages.

He wished his adherents to lead a strict, disciplined, self-denying life, without following the distinction; private property now becomes, without qualification, part of the divine law. He was convinced that Christianity is compatible with industrialism and capitalism, and that this type of civilisation is, or may be, more Christian than the feudalism and militarism of the Middle Ages.

CHEUNG CHAU NOTES

Mr. de Silva Lectures
On FijiHELENA MAY AT HOME
WELL ATTENDED

[From Our Own Correspondent] Cheung Chau, Sunday.—Bad weather hindered some people from attending the lantern lecture on Fiji given by Mr. de Silva recently, but the lecture itself was most interesting. Mr. de Silva giving a survey of the history and customs of the islanders. Coloured slides illustrating many of its beauties and some of the dances and tribal customs, native houses, etc., were shown. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the lecturer after the function.

Another exhibition and sale of knitted and other goods worked by the girls of the Blind Home will shortly be held.

The Council of the Helena May Institute have again kindly invited all the missionaries residing on Cheung Chau to an At-Home Tea and Concert to-morrow evening. They will also provide a special launch to convey the guests to and from Hong Kong.

The service to-day was in charge of the Rev. H. Davies, who preached an eloquent and thoughtful sermon on the words: "On this rock I will build my church." Next Sunday the Rev. S. Cousins of the L.M.S. will preach.

Many Visit Colony

Cheung Chau, yesterday. Quite a number of the missionaries from Cheung Chau, availed themselves of the invitation of the Helena May Institute, and in addition to the special launch, cars were provided to convey the guests from Blake Pier to the Institute.

An excellent tea was provided, and an opportunity was given the guests to meet other missionary friends residing in the Colony. Following the tea a short but interesting musical programme was provided. A vote of thanks was voiced by Dr. C. A. Hayes on behalf of the visitors. Much trouble and thought had been put into the arrangements, and to all who contributed in any way to our enjoyment we tender our hearty thanks.

TELEVISION IN BRITAIN

London, to-day.—A Post Office announcement regarding television states that the first test transmission is expected to start early next year and that a regular public service will follow as soon as is practicable. Technical information necessary for the designing of television receivers in connection with the proposed transmissions will be made public at an early date.—British Wireless Service.

CHAIRMAN

London, To-day.—The World Conference on Faith and Order, which seeks to establish cordial relations between members of the different Christian Churches by enabling their representatives to discuss together their agreements and differences, will hold its next session in Great Britain.

Although the meeting will not take place till August 1937, the plans are engaging the attention of a continuation committee under the chairmanship of the Archbishop of York. A meeting has been fixed to follow the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work which will be held at Oxford in July of the same year, so as to suit the convenience of many delegates from overseas. No will have to travel long distances to attend both conferences.—British-Wireless Service.

Organisations' Future
Discussed

—CHINA MAIL—SPECIAL

Berlin, To-day.—Great importance is attached in political circles here to a conversation which took place yesterday between Herr Hitler and the Labour Minister, Herr Seldte, in the course of which the future of the Steel Helmet organisation was thoroughly discussed, according to an official communique, which does not contain further information.

Herr Seldte is the leader of the Steel Helmet organisation, which is officially known as the National Socialist Front Fighters' League, of which numerous local branches have been proscribed recently, owing to the subversive activities of their members.—Trans-Ocean Service.

made a renewed declaration of confidence in the League of Nations and called on all the member States, great or small, to see that justice was done.

"After the World War," continued the Emperor, "the construction of the edifice of peace was begun. Now we are threatened with war, the consequences of which will possibly be felt by the whole world. Abyssinia, therefore, is firmly determined to do all she can to preserve the peace. She maintains peace and order in her own territory and will never renounce her independence and sovereignty. From the League of Nations she awaits justice and equality of rights like all the other nations.

"Should the catastrophe of war burst upon Abyssinia, the nation and the Emperor will shed their last drop of blood in the defence of the country, assisted by national fortifications—the mountains and deserts which God has given them."

GENERAL STAFF

—CHINA MAIL—SPECIAL

Prague, To-day.—A delegation of five Soviet officers, headed by the commander of the Moscow Military Academy, were to have arrived here last night, according to the Telegram.

The Russian officers, who were invited to Prague by the Czechoslovakian military authorities on the occasion of their visit to Moscow, will be the guests of the Czech General Staff at the chief army manoeuvres, which take place at the end of this month and which will also be attended by leading Yugoslav and Rumanian army officers.

The foreign officers will also be taken over the factories in the Czechoslovak armaments industry.—Trans-Ocean Service.

GERMAN DIESEL
EXPRESS CARS"Flying Frankfurter"
Sets Record

SUCCESSFUL TRIAL RUN

—CHINA MAIL—SPECIAL

Berlin, To-day.—The "Flying Frankfurter," which is the third of the Diesel electric express cars to be put into operation on the principal German railway lines, made a successful trial run yesterday from Frankfurt to Berlin and back to Frankfurt. The "Flying Frankfurter," which, like its two predecessors, the "Flying Hamburger" and the "Flying Coloner," consists of two streamlined coaches seating 80 passengers, covered the distance between Frankfurt and Berlin in 5 hours, 6 minutes, which is 1½ hours less than the scheduled time for the fastest steam-driven express.

The highest speed, 105 miles an hour, was attained between Erfurt and Berlin. The new express will make its first regular journey next Thursday.

Similar Diesel express services will soon be inaugurated between Frankfurt and Nuremberg, Berlin and Munich, Berlin and Breslau, and Hamburg and Cologne.—Trans-Ocean Service.

REVOLVER CHARGE

Man Remanded In Custody

Thomas Jones, aged 25, was charged at Watford recently with attempting to break and enter the house of Miss Charlotte Angela Cooper, at Bushey, with stealing property to the value of 5s., and with having a revolver and ammunition without a certificate. Police-constable Spring said he went to Miss Cooper's house in California lane, and saw Jones in a bedroom. Miss Cooper told him she found the man under the bed. Jones said he went there out of the storm, as he was afraid of lightning. Jones was remanded in custody.

To-day's Short Story.

MENAGE A
TROISBy Vincent
Sheean

He came into the wide central hall of the house in a hurry. The scene which greeted him was for the time of evening somewhat bizarre. A huge crate stood in the middle of the hall, while a small black-haired creature in a red dress and sweater lectured and gesticulated.

"Lili! What on earth are you doing? Isn't it time we were both dressed?"

She stopped talking abruptly, bewildered. She frowned under her bushy black hair, trying to adjust herself to this voice from another world.

"Hello, darling," she said. "Have a nice game? Isn't this lovely? The piano has come."

She allowed herself to be kissed, but her eyes scarcely left the crate.

"What piano?" the man asked, staring over her head. "And anyway, what's the difference? Isn't it high time we were both dressed? I can make it in 10 or 15 minutes, but it always takes you hours."

She patted his arm gently.

"There, there, Martin, don't be annoyed with me," she said. "I honestly forgot all about dressing, and I can't remember what I'm supposed to dress for anyway. I'm terribly excited about the piano. What party is it now? Must I go?"

"It's the Mitchells," he said, his words chopping out in crisp little clicks. "I've told you a dozen times. They're going away to-morrow. And we've got to drive all the way to Nice by eight o'clock. It's seven now."

WHIST DRIVE AND
TOMBOLAAnother Successful
Function

THIRTY TABLES OCCUPIED

Favoured with fine but somewhat windy weather, the fourth of the series of Whist Drives and Tombola by the Royal Engineers Old Comrades' Association was held in Wellington Barracks yesterday evening, and was an unprecedented success.

Thirty tables were occupied by enthusiastic members of the Association and their friends. Prizes to the value of £40 were very kindly presented by Mrs. J. Holland, during which pleasant ceremony light refreshments were served.

The attendance proves abundantly that, although only recently resuscitated, the local Branch of the Royal Engineers Old Comrades' Association is achieving the object of its existence in bringing together the serving members and ex-serving Royal Engineers in the Colony. Further, it has become evident that this series of Whist Drives and Tombola has become a popular addition to the social amenities of the Colony, and it is hoped that all ex-Royal Engineers—"Once a Sapper always a Sapper"—who have not yet come along will make every endeavour to do so at the next Whist Drive, which is being held in Wellington Barracks on Monday, August 26, commencing at 8.30 p.m.

ARSON CHARGE

Accused Pleads
Guilty

Shum Po-lam, aged 22, unemployed, of no fixed abode, pleaded guilty to a charge of arson when he appeared this morning before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy.

Detective Sub-Inspector J. C. S. Fender, who prosecuted, asked for one week's formal remand. The accused was charged in connection with the fire which took place at the Chan Yuk Sound Motion Picture Company's Studio, Ming Yuen Gardens, on Saturday night last. His worship granted the remand.

"Darling, darling," she said, still watching the silent blue-bloused workmen. "I don't want to see the Mitchells. I never want to see the Mitchells. You know perfectly well that they are the dullest over-stuffed ornithological specimens we've ever known in our lives, and they make me absolutely ill."

"You accepted the engagement," said Martin coldly, moving toward the stairs.

"I accepted?" she echoed in surprise, staring after him. "My dear, you must be mad. I couldn't possibly have accepted. You arranged it and informed me that we were going. I wasn't ever consulted in the matter at any point. In my entire life I have never gone to dinner with such stuffed owls and jaybirds of my own free will."

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be "The Wine Of The Tetrarch," by Isak Dinesen.

Martin turned around at the foot of the stairs.

"The stuffed owls and jaybirds," he said, "are my friends. I went to school and college with George Mitchell. I know he's no great brilliant figure, like your friends, but he's a good fellow and he's an important man in the motor business."

"Oh, Martin!" she said, coming over toward him for the first time her eyes left the crate and the silent workmen. "Don't let's quarrel about such a silly thing. I'll dress and go to the stupid dinner if you absolutely insist. But do let me off, just this once."

In his old golf clothes and sweater, standing angrily there by the foot of the stairs, Martin Eggleston was a handsome figure of a man. His wife had to look up at him to get his eyes.

"You can do exactly as you please," said Martin. "You will anyway, so what's the use of talking? You are the great Lili Strauss, and of course it was wonderful of you to marry me at all, so what right have I to complain? I'm going to drive to Nice and dine with the Mitchells, that's all. I suppose I can tell them that my celebrated and charming wife couldn't come because she has a new tin pan to practise on and can't bear to wait until morning."

"Oh, I can't stand such talk!" she said. "Do you think I have no feelings, no resentments, nothing to complain about? You go off and play golf all afternoon with a stupid Scotch professional who doesn't know a thing about anything but strokes and clubs; and when you come in you don't ask a single question about me."

"My piano—Borisoglebaky's piano, willed to me in his will, the most perfect piano in the world—is just a tin pan! You don't care what it is! You don't care anything about me! All I'm good for is to dress up in silly clothes and load on jewels and sit and be wretched all evening with your ghastly friends, just to impress them! Just go that they can tell all their horrible little banker and broker friends that they had dinner with Lili Strauss, and she was this and she was that, and why does she wear that awful bang over her eyes? and what Martin sees in her?"

Martin broke in. His voice was slower now, in a calm frigidity which covered Lili like cold water.

"My friends need not trouble you," he said. "I don't want you to go to the dinner. Not now. You would simply insult them all, in one way or another, before the evening was over. You can stay at home. With your piano."

He turned to go upstairs, but before he had taken three steps she was after him. She was crying now.

"Oh, dearest!" she said, throwing herself in front of him. "I'm sorry—I'm so sorry—I don't want to be nasty. It's just that I remember of mine, you know."

He took her in his arms and kissed her.

WAVE£10 Damages For Young Man

A young man was awarded £10 damages against a Belfast hairdresser, in Ulster High Court recently, for negligence in the permanent waving of his hair.

Plaintiff was Samuel McGarry, Templepatrick, County Antrim, and he said that he joined a club to get his hair permanently waved. When he went to a hairdresser his scalp was damaged by the machine.

Reduction In Wages

The Lord Chief Justice: A young man having his hair permanently waved?—Yes.

McGarry said that as a result of injuries to the head he had suffered a reduction in wages and was unable to play football.

DRAMA OF FLAT

Idea Ends

Seven years ago, after her husband died, Mrs. Arthur Yates, who has died at Hastings, went to Charlton to take a flat in Church-lane. She filled it with her husband's furniture, making it a memorial of their married life.

Later, when Mrs. Yates found she could not live there without her husband, she went to live in Hastings, but occasionally revisited the flat.

Last month the furniture was sold for a few shillings.

REAL UNITY SOUGHT IN THE COUNTRY

General Huang will return to his native province, Kwangsi, this afternoon. He will go straight to Nanning, where he is scheduled to have discussions with his former colleagues, Generals Li Chung-jen and Pai Hsueh-hsi. His mission is to induce Kwangtung and Kwangsi to support General Chiang, so that the latter may show a united front towards Japanese aggression.

The South-west leaders are willing to back up General Chiang Kai-shek, it is understood, if he is really sincere in using his forces to deal with external matters and not with internal political intrigues. In such a case, a new President of the Executive Yuan and Foreign Minister will be appointed in place of Mr. Wang Ching-wei, and will effect real unity within the country.

GIRL MOTORIST'S
EXPLANATIONWhy She Exceeded
30 M.P.H.

When a girl motorist was summoned at Highgate for exceeding the speed limit, she said:

"I definitely did more than 30. You see there was a car in front of me doing about 27 miles an hour, and the driver of this car was one of those persons who deliberately go about preventing people from passing them. And I did so want to pass him because he was going ever so slow, and to overtake him I had to put on a great 'big spurt'."

It's Not Done"

The magistrate suggested that if the driver of the other car was only doing 27 miles an hour she could have passed him without exceeding the limit.

"Oh, yes," said the girl. "But to keep within the limit would have meant passing him terribly slowly, and you can't really pass anybody terribly slowly—it's not done."

The magistrate: Fined 20s and licence endorsed.

TROY'S WOODEN
HORSEIdea Followed By
Ingenious Thieves

How a gang of young thieves carried out a robbery by concealing a boy in a chest was related by Miss M. G. Cowan, at the Imperial Social Hygiene Congress in London recently.

Miss Cowan said there appeared to be a high type of mental ability entering into modern crime—an element of adventure and interest. She added:

"The gang who recently concealed the smallest of their members in a tea-chest, delivered the chest at an adjacent tobacconist's shop and, on the analogy of the House of Troy, carried through a night-logging of the shop, were not mentally defective."

Menage A Trois

"That's all right, ducky," he said in a softer voice. "I'm sorry, too. It can't be helped. I just got angry. I'm afraid my temper's worse than yours." She was crying desperately into the soft wool of his sweater. "Oh, Martin, darling," she said. "I'll go. I'd love to go, only please don't be angry with me. I'll go and I'll try to be nice, and answer questions and talk to that awful Mr. Mitchell. You'll see, dear, how nice I'll be." "But I don't want you to go, sweetheart," he said, running his fingers through the bushy fringe of hair over her forehead. "It now ruins your nerves for twenty-four hours to go to that kind of party. I know it does. It's stupid of me to want you to be like any little suburban housewife. You aren't that sort of person at all, thank God. And I love you the way you are." "Do you, sweet?" she asked of his wollen sweater. "But I love you, too, and that's why I'm going to go; you'll see."

She extricated herself from his arms with one swift movement and ran down to the hall. He followed her.

"But I don't want you to, darling," he protested. "I know you're dying to see the piano and play on it. I want you to stay and do it. I don't want you to go to the dinner, honestly I don't." "You don't want me to go to the dinner?" she demanded, turning back to him again. "Then what on earth has all this been about?"

She paused, fixed her eyes on him, and frowned.

"Oh, I see," she said. "You don't want me to disgrace you. That's it. I've done it too often, I suppose. You think that because we had this little disagreement I'll be rude and nervous at the dinner, and your precious Mitchell will wonder again what Martin sees in that awful Lili Strauss. Is that it?" "No, that isn't it," he said impatiently. "Will you never get anything straight? I don't want you to go because I realise that you'd be miserable. I don't want to make you miserable. If you'd rather be here with this damned piano, then I think you ought to stay."

"This damned piano!" she echoed. "Do you realise that this is one of the most beautiful pianos I've ever heard in my life? It was built for Borisoglebsky, and his hands were almost exactly the same shape and size as mine, and... Oh, Martin, what's the use?"

She leaned her head against the side of the crate, and the tears shone again on her cheek-bones. "All right, dear," said Martin quietly. "Please don't be disturbed. I'll run up and dress and get off to the dinner. Don't worry. Everything's going to be all right."

He kissed her tears away and left her there. She did not speak again, and until his disappearance at the top of the stairs she stood with her head leaning against the side of the crate.

Then, as if for the first time, she became aware of the four French workmen. They had gathered in a clump, stolid, but fascinated, watching her. Nothing in this house was likely to surprise them, since its inhabitants were not only American but musical. Their interest was none the less keen, and Lili realised what a pretty story would be told in the village cafes that night.

She began to move about briskly, giving directions, ringing bells, sending for newspapers to put down on the floor, impressing upon the workmen the need for great care. When Martin came downstairs ten minutes later, dressed for dinner, she was too busy to give him more than a glance.

"Quick, work," she said absent-mindedly, extending her cheek to be kissed. "You dress quicker than anybody in the world. Should have been an actor. Have a nice time, dear." He was gone, and as she overheard the first blow of the hammer on the framework of the crate she heard, out in the courtyard, the roar of his motor getting off in a great hurry. She did not think of it, or of him; she was all most breathless with anxiety lest a careless blow might somehow injure the precious freight inside that wooden box.

"Oh, prenez garde, prenez garde!" she said to the workmen, standing on the tips of her toes as if to see better what was directly before her eyes.

In less than an hour the work was completed, and the lovely thing emerged from its straw and cotton wool, intact, exquisite, its smooth, lovely walnut legs lying on the floor ready to be put on.

At last it was set up. She was almost out of her mind with delight. Jean, her butler, respectfully suggested that she might have some dinner; it was already ten o'clock and Madame had eaten nothing since noon. But Madame was not hungry.

"Clear out all the debris in the hall," she said, "and pay these men. Perhaps later on I may eat. You might have some sandwiches made; Monsieur might like them when he returns. And put a pint of champagne on ice."

She approached the lovely instrument almost in fear. It seemed too good to be true that this piano, which she had touched once years ago in Borisoglebsky's studio and dreamed about ever since, was now to be her own for ever.

Borisoglebsky had been a virtuoso with phenomenally small hands, almost exactly the size and shape of her own.

For him, before the War, a famous German piano-builder had constructed this perfect instrument. It had a slightly shortened keyboard without any loss of beauty or power. The tops of the black keys were slightly rounded, so as to make the rapid movements of brilliant passages somewhat less difficult for a small hand. A pianist with a different sort of hand would have had trouble playing on it. But for Lili Strauss....

She unclasped her fingers nervously and sat down at the instrument. It had been placed at the end of the huge room she used as a studio. Martin Eggleston did things well; when he decided to spend his and his wife's vacation on the Riviera he had taken a chateau. This was the largest room in the house, and with a proper disposition of rugs and furniture the echo from stone walls had been conquered, and all music sounded clear and round within it.

Lili tried the pedals first. They felt all right. The piano had not had far to go—Borisoglebsky's place was near Monte Carlo. With luck the instrument might be in almost perfect pitch. Lili thought nothing of tuning a piano herself; she had always held that a pianist ought to be able to do anything short of actually building an instrument; but she would never have dreamed of attempting to tune this one. She would get the man up from Nice in the morning and stand

UNKNOWN WOMAN TAKES POISON

Hyde Park Tragedy

An "unknown" woman, aged about 65, drank disinfectant in Hyde Park on June 29. She was taken to St. George's Hospital, where she died. At the Westminster inquest later Mr. Ingley Oddie, the coroner, recorded a verdict of Suicide, saying that there was not sufficient evidence to show her state of mind.

EX-OFFICER HERMIT FOUND DEAD

Occupied Two Houses

William Fleming, 72, a retired army captain, formerly in a Scottish regiment, was found dead in a house in Treasillian-road, Brockley, S.E., recently. Police who entered the house believe that the man had been dead for about ten days. Fleming, who also occupied the house next door, had lived alone for some years, and was well known for his eccentric habits. He had a hole made in the wall of one of the houses, and when people whom he did not wish to see called at one house, he would disappear through the hole into the next.

Attorneys for Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, the distinguished physician sentenced to life imprisonment in a Mississippi prison for the "highball" slaying of her former lover, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, base their plea for pardon on the statement of other doctors that imprisonment would mean her death within a year. These are her latest pictures.

over him while he worked.

She stretched out her hands over the keys, held her breath for a second, and then struck a chord. It sounded full and strong, exactly in tune. Then another and another, rhyming the octaves, while her head was ringing with the beauty of the sound. There were a few notes in the extreme bass and a few in the extreme treble which seemed to have slipped a bit, but only a bit. For the greater part of its compass it was nobly, splendidly, precisely right.

For a long while she sat there contemplating it, thinking of Borisoglebsky and the things he had played on this keyboard and of the marvellous hands this keyboard had known. A weird creature, Borisoglebsky—rude, self-satisfied, almost impossible for any human being to endure, but a superb pianist; how like him to leave his perfect piano to Lili Strauss, whom he had scarcely known and never liked!

A piano belongs to the hands that can play it, she thought; Borisoglebsky on his deathbed had known this fact. Nobody else in the world could rightly inherit this piano, whatever the laws or conventions of mankind might say. A piano belongs to the hands that can play it.

She rubbed her hands together and began to play. At first she played hard, brisk modern things, and the staccato was a delight. Then, to see how its tone accommodated itself to other moods, she played romantic music, Chopin and Liszt and Schumann. She had no idea how long she sat there playing.

Toward the end she began to pay her devotions to the Master she loved above all others, Bach. She had worked her way nearly half through the "Well Tempered Clavier" when a cough behind her brought her to a stop. She looked up, frowning. Martin had come into the room and stood looking at her.

"Oh, hello, dear?" she said. "Doesn't it sound divine? I couldn't believe it at first, but it's scarcely out of tune at all. I think a few notes high up have slipped, and may be a few in the deep bass, but all the rest... What's the matter?"

"Have you been playing that thing all night long?" he asked. "It's damn near two o'clock. Do you know that?"

"She rose hastily, moved toward him. "Oh, dear," she said. "That's silly of me, isn't it? Perhaps I ought to eat something. I had some sandwiches put out and a little champagne. Did you have a nice evening, dear?"

"No," he said, taking off his coat and scarf and dropping them on a chair. "It was all right, but they all missed you and asked a lot of questions. I do think you might have made an effort this once."

GREAT COLT RETIRES AFTER TRIUMPH

Theft might steal it. Well, it was a badly run race, and still Windsor Lad won. When the gate went up Smirke had to make his own running. This lazy colt is always the better for having a pace-maker, which was proved, if proof were needed, by the race for the Coronation Cup, in which he beat Easton.

Slowly Run Race

Windsor Lad does not like making the running, and he did not go along at his best pace. To watch, it seemed a very slowly run race. Windsor Lad led the field into the straight, and still the pace was poor. About three furlongs from the winning post, Gordon Richards elected to take a feeler at him on Fair Trial. It was such a strong feeler that Fair Trial was soon half a length in front of the favourite.

Then there was a gasp from admirers of Windsor Lad, for he was still running lazily, but they had reckoned without the strong combatative quality that is one of the colt's greatest assets. When he began to rouse himself, and put his latent fire into his work. He ran on, and entering the last furlong had the pretensions of Fair Trial well settled.

Theft's Challenge

Incidentally, in making his run, Windsor Lad came away a little from the rails and perilously close to Fair Trial. It was Theft that made the last demonstration, for he came on the outside, and when he found the ground firmer than he had found it before, he was flying, and was a good second. It was a performance on the part of Theft well up to his best, for here he was meeting a colt of quite exceptional merit, and it can be said again that Theft is not the mere brilliant miler that some people think, even though the race was run to suit him.

The crowd hardly waited for Windsor Lad to pass the post before the torrent of cheering broke out, for he had decisively asserted his superiority when he had come again and beaten Theft.

One heard many criticisms of the jockeyship in the race—that Gordon Richards came too early on Fair Trial, that Smirke should have set Windsor Lad alight sooner, and never have allowed him to be headed, and so on. The fact remains that on what is not his best course, or his best distance, and in a race run to the advantage of his rivals, Windsor Lad still won. It is a big field of all the best in England, with something taking them along at a tearaway pace, he would have won far more easily.

Mr. Benson intends to take Windsor Lad to his Beech House stud at Newmarket when his new box and appanages are ready, which will be next month. The horse is full at a fee of 400 guineas for next year and the year after, and only those who applied early have been able to secure nominations.

If a great Turf career guarantees stud success then Windsor Lad should be eminently successful for no horse of recent years has retired with a finer and more comprehensive record, which includes the Derby, St. Leger and the Coronation Cup, as well as the Eclipse.

Bold Venture Justified

Only once since he had a few preliminary runs as a two-year-old has he been beaten. That was in the Eclipse of last year, where bad luck in running came his way. It was a few days after that and with the defeat still on him that Mr. Benson gave the Maharaja of Rajppla 550,000 for him. It was a bold venture at the time, but there has seldom been one that has justified itself so well.

This colt's career has been one of the romances of racing. When his half-sister was sold this week for 5,100 guineas I mentioned that Mr. Sullivan, his breeder, had bought his grandam for a trifle more than a hundred pounds in the early days of the war. He sold the colt as yearling to Marcus Marsh—who has trained him so magnificently and made him into the good horse that he became—for 1,800 guineas. By stages, erected spirit that fell. By all Windsor Lad has grown in value until to-day he could be sold for 550,000, were his owner disposed to part with him, which he is not.

Menage A Trois

"What's wrong with the man?" she asked, addressing the furniture. "I offered to go to his stupid dinner, and he wouldn't let me!"

"Well, it was only because you obviously would have hated it," he said. "But just the same it was a disappointment to them. There was a woman who plays the piano, wife of one of the directors of the company. Nice woman, too. She was crushed because you didn't come. Where are the sandwiches?"

"In the dining room, I suppose," she said, leading the way. The sandwiches, instead of being in the dining room, stood on a table near the shadowy door of the studio. Beside them was a bucket of ice with a pint bottle in it.

"Open the champagne, Martin," she said. "Will you, please? I want to christen my piano. I can't tell you how lovely it is. I never dreamed I could ever have anything so lovely."

"I suppose so," he said. "But you can't expect me to be in a state of high fever about it. After all, a man does expect certain common or garden social things from his wife, and it's pretty hard to be cheated by a wooden box with some string in it. Here's your wine."

She took the wineglass and walked dreamily over toward the black piano.

"Here's to you," she said. "My beautiful piano!" She drank the whole glass of champagne and held it aloft as for a toast.

"Honestly," he said, "you are absurd, Lili. Don't you know you're absurd? Have you no sense of humour? You talk to that thing as if it were human."

"Oh, yes, of course," she said. "Pose is that it? Pose. A handy word to use for something you don't understand. My dear, have you made the slightest effort to get it through your head some wooden head what that piano means to me? This is one of the happiest days of my life. Perhaps the happiest."

SUBSTITUTES FOR RELIGION

Lippmann says: "The sponsors of the Broadway Temple in New York proclaimed a campaign to buy bonds as a 5 per cent investment in your fellow man's salvation." The 5 per cent was based on Christian grounds and on gilt-edged mortgage.

A very mild echo of this smug complacency may be found in Smiles' "Self-Help," a favourite gift to boys when I was young. Christ speaks of those who "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel." He has another saying about a camel, too.

Covetousness

It is strange that there should be no limit to acquisitiveness, considering that nature has given us only one stomach. As the medieval jingle says, "Non est in mundo dives qui dicit abundo." The Communists think they can destroy covetousness by a radical operation: Remove the temptation and the vice will disappear.

But even if "the World" could be scotched, the Flesh and the Devil remain, and acquisitiveness will return under another form. The mere bandit must be dealt with by the law.

For ordinary mortals we must trust to removing the prestige which still attaches to mere wealth, and I think there has been a great change in this direction within my lifetime. The mere collector of stocks and shares is as absurd as the collector of stamps or walking sticks. He may know the price of everything, but he knows the value of nothing; he is what the New Testament calls him, a fool.

He gave them their desire, and sent leanness withal into their souls. The Americans seem to be at last making up their minds to deal faithfully with the worshippers of "Mammon, the least of all gods." By all accounts it will be like cleaning the Augean stable. But a false religion can only be driven out by a true one.

"Thank you," he said. "You've no idea what a difference it will make in my playing," she said. "I shall take it on my American tour next month, and to Australia after that."

"Oh, so you're going to Australia?" he said. "I thought we had decided against that. After all, Lili, you're married to me."

"I know," she said. "You remind me often enough. And I'm glad I'm married to you. But does that mean that I've got to sit in New York or Detroit and go to dinner with the potentates of your business for the rest of my life?"

"I thought I had been reasonable enough," he said. "I have always agreed that you should continue your career. For three months out of every year you go on tour and play for everybody from Maine to California who can buy a ticket."

She stood, head down, munching a sandwich. Her hair was dishevelled and there were smudges on her face. She still wore the red skirt and old sweater of the afternoon. He watched her through a long silence.

"Lili," he said, "why did you marry me? We've been married four years and I still don't know."

She looked up and smiled. "Oh, Martin," she said softly. "You're an idiot. Why did I marry you, is it well, how do I know? I loved you, I suppose, and still do. I don't know why we have to quarrel all the time."

He shook his head suddenly; she thought he might have done it to keep tears from coming in his eyes, and she marvelled. Such a thing had never happened before.

"Lili, dear," he began in a rather clouded voice. Then he cleared his throat and turned away.

"Where the devil's the whisky?" he asked irritably. "Why can't that man learn to put out whisky and soda at night? I can't drink champagne—hate the stuff, as I tell him every day."

"It's in the dining room, dear," she said. "I'll get it for you."

She ran into the dining-room quickly and was back in two minutes with a bottle of whisky and a siphon.

"Here it is," she said. "Now how's that for the dutiful wife? Aren't I the little woman?"

"Yes," he said, "except that I can't drink out of the bottle. Are there no glasses in this house?"

She put the bottle and siphon down on the table and reached for her wineglass.

"There are," she said coolly, "and you know where they are. You can get one yourself. I'm not used to being spoken to like that."

He was out of the room in a moment, with one furious glance at her. She sipped a little wine and went over to the piano. She heard him come in behind her and mix his drink.

"Martin," she said, "I realise that it's two in the morning and you're tired from golf and that stupid party, and you don't like music much anyway, and you hate my beautiful piano, but used to like to hear me play. Wouldn't you like to hear something—just some little thing, so that you'll know what it sounds like?"

"All right," he said after a pause. She sat down and played. After she had passed the first few notes she had forgotten Martin completely. She was no longer playing for him at all; she was playing as she had played all night for her piano.

Martin was not given to getting up. Isn't it wonderful? It's just as wonderful this morning as it was last night! Have you had breakfast?"

"Yes, darling," he said. "What's wonderful?"

"The piano, you goose! Now don't begin to be tiresome again. What are you going to do this morning?"

"I thought I might get in a little golf over at the club," he said. "Scotty is pretty good, you know."

She made a slight dissatisfied noise, a thread of sound through her nose. He was watching her. His calm gray eyes were curious. "Lili," he said, "what about that momentous decision?"

"Decision?" she echoed, wrinkling her brows under their fringe of black. "Oh, that! Now, really, Martin, you shouldn't begin to argue so early in the morning. You know it makes my head ache."

"All right, pigeon," he said. "Give us a kiss."

Half an hour later he was off to the golf club. She heard the roar of his motor as she turned back into the room and walked toward the piano. It stood black and proud there under the morning sun. As Martin's motor grew inaudible in the distance, she touched the gleaming surface gently, touched it with hands of love.

So far as electricity was concerned, advertising increased consumption, and the greater the consumption the greater the possibility of supplying it more cheaply.

Sir William Ray, who also replied, appealed for 100 per cent membership of the Association among the supply industry.
